

Remarks By

Commissioner James H. Quello

at the 1997 Catherine Forster Award Ceremony

It is my pleasure to congratulate the exemplary public servants who are the 1997 recipients of the Catherine Forster Public Service Awards. Each of the Forster award recipients has distinguished him or herself through exceptional performance of their everyday responsibilities. These fine government employees set a standard for which we all strive.

One of the aspects of my job as Commissioner that I have most enjoyed during my twenty-three years at this Commission, is the opportunity, indeed privilege, to work with dedicated and talented people such as the Forster Award winners. We are exceptionally busy here at the FCC at this time. And I do not foresee that changing any time soon. Nevertheless, we should always make the time to pay tribute to FCC employees that exhibit the highest standards of government service. That is what we do here today. Congratulations!
