Dear John,

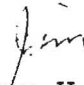

I am one lucky SOB -- to have you as such a good friend! In the midst of receiving a well deserved award, you took the time to praise my efforts.

After your kind remarks, my personal stock shot up 200 percent before all those communications lawyers and lobbyists.

Thanks for your thoughtfulness, your longtime friendship and for just being what you are -- a great effective government leader, a loyal friend and one helluva guy.

I hope to continue to be worthy of the confidence you place in me.

Gratefully and respectfully,

James H. Quello

Dear Dan,

Your thoughtful note regarding my latest "pre-posthumous" award is appreciated.

One of the few advantages of growing older is that you automatically acquire venerability Under the "venerable" classification, you get credit for virtues you never had. Nevertheless, I appreciate all my late life awards.

Incidentally, I'm glad your staying active with a baseball team. Even with a lush affordable retirement, there is only so much golf you can play, boats you can ride or arthritis books you can read before boredom creeps in. With all the hectic developments at the FCC, I just don't have time to grow old. However, we should not resent growing old, many are denied the privilege.

If your travel or business takes you to Washington, please call so we can have lunch or a visit. In the meantime, the best to you, Bunny and the kids.

Sincerely,

James H. Quello

Dear Congressman Matsui,

Your presence added so much to my latest ancient ritual ceremony (80th birthday)!

We appreciate your taking time from your hectic Congressional schedule to attend.

Thanks for your thoughtfulness and your friendship.

Kindest regards,

Dear Dennis,

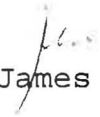

Mary and I were delighted to see your attractive Irish kisser at my latest ancient ritual ceremony.

Also when I got home, I spent the next three hours fascinated by "The World at Arms" -- the most authentic and comprehensive of the World War II history books. It is now the star of my WW II library collection.

Thanks for your presence, your present and especially your friendship.

Let's get together soon. Love to lovely Paula and those handsome kids.

Best,

James H. Quello

Dear Sandy,

Your beautiful floral arrangement added so much to my latest ancient ritual ceremony (--birthday)!

Actually, I should be sending you a huge floral tribute for your outstanding leadership in implementing the complex cable statutes. Everyone respects the great job you are doing.

Thanks for your thoughtfulness, your friendship and for just being what you are -- effective, dedicated, loyal and lovely.

Best,

James H. Quello
